

CAUSATION

International Journal of Science

Errare humanum est,
sed in errare
perseverare diabolicum.

(Hieronymus; Seneca, Epistulae morales VI,57,12; Cicero, Orationes Philippicae 12,2)

To the unknown reader,

Errors can occur frequently in published journal articles.
A peer review does not guarantee anything but can be of help in this context.
The article/s in this issue of Causation are highly speculative and not peer reviewed.

Therefore, this issue of causation should be read only with great caution.

In last consequence, it appears to be more appropriate to consider the article/s presented in this issue of Causation rather as pure thoughts for further research than as secured and reliable scientific knowledge.

Thank you very much for your understanding.

Ilija Barukčić